

We're all in this together

Share issues and insights
in a trusted group.

Be the Business Peer Learning groups provide an opportunity for you to get together online with like-minded family firm leaders and work through the issues your businesses are facing right now.

Using an approach known as “action learning” is a great way to address the difficulties that you and your business are encountering, and get valuable input from people who really understand the unique responsibilities of running a family firm. It will open up new ideas, and provide you with support as you lead your business through these challenging times.

What's involved

Regular sessions in a small group overseen by a trained facilitator. Discussions are confidential, so be prepared to get candid in sharing your concerns and challenges, as well as offering open and honest feedback to others.

Your group will stay together for at least three months, so you'll get to know each other well. There's no financial cost to participation.

Where you'll gain

- Support from a group of trusted peers to work through real business issues
- The confidence to act and make decisive changes in your business
- The leadership skills needed to support your employees through this difficult time
- Access to a sounding board which can challenge your thinking and strategies
- An enhanced network, and access to a range of tools, content and support

“Speaking with someone who’s in a different sector but in a similar role is a massive help. When you’re in your own bubble it’s important to share with others what you’ve tried before and to get feedback on your new ideas.”

Heather Bendle, Thomas Graham & Sons

Sign up now for online sessions

We want to help as many businesses as we can to get through this difficult time and to plan for success when the virus passes.

Contact us at familybusiness@bethebusiness.com to sign up for online sessions starting in April and May.

Be the Business Peer Learning Groups are delivered in partnership with Thomas Jardine & Co, The Family Business Network, and Family Business United.

